Sweden's king and queen invading Philly

The king and queen of Sweden will visit Philadelphia for two days this weekend, officials said. King Carl XVI Gustaf and Queen Silvia will be in the city Friday and Saturday. "They will tour the Barnes Foundation on the Benjamin Franklin Parkway and visit Independence Hall, the Liberty Bell and the American Swedish Historical Museum," according to the news release. Mayor Michael Nutter will welcome the Swedish royals on the 375th anniversary of the founding of New Sweden colony. On Saturday, the royal couple will attend a symposium on "Making It in America" at the Independence Seaport Museum with the speaker of parliament of Finland, Eero Olavi Heinaluoma, the release said.

App touts 'social decision making'

Tech. A local smartphone app developer thinks decision making is the wave of social media's future.

People — especially young people — are increasingly turning to social media to seek answers about everything from what they should wear on a date to where they should go to college.

One Philadelphia businessman is seeking to capitalize on the development, so much so that he's trademarked the term "social decision-making" with the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office.

"We knew we wanted to do something in social media, and we wanted to do something that's a logical next step," said Michael Rizzo, whose free smartphone app Choozum encourages participants to vote on user-submitted multiple-choice surveys.

"You've got one-eighth of human beings on Facebook sharing, inviting each other to events — so many activities are happening — but very little are you actually leveraging that base to help you do things."

With Choozum, Rizzo seeks to enable users to do just that, syncing with Facebook so they can share surveys and invite friends to give input.

"If you want to ask your five favorite people where you should [vacation] or where you should go eat tonight or whatever, all of those people are going to get a notification on Facebook within a half-second of you posting on Choozum," Rizzo said.

"However long it takes to see the notification and get a response back, you're going to get statistics calculated very differently than anybody else it doing today."

Rizzo said various age groups tend to use the app in different ways. "What we're finding is the younger side of our demographic — say, 16, 17 — they're really not private. They like to do things publicly," Rizzo said.

Older users, in contrast, tend to seek input exclusively from people they know, according to Rizzo.

"As people come onto the app and start realizing that there is this capability that allows you to ask a bunch of people something privately, not post it in a public community — maturity and evolution factor into that," he said.

Catering to colleges

Choozum has been particularly popular in Greek life, especially at Ivy League schools, where much of its advertising has been targeted.

"We decided to hire ambassador interns, Choozum ambassadors or evangelists," Rizzo said, adding the interns must be elected officials within a sorority.

"The thinking is that particular audience will help define our enhancements – the way people use the app, what features they want next – and then we hope that outside of Greek life, people in other segments will start to utilize the app, as well."

City controller: AVI undermines the poor, blacks

Under and over. City Controller said yesterday that the new property assessments don't make the cut.

Carnegie Mellon University Professor Robert Strauss would not give AVI a passing grade.

"I'm grading final exams. ... And the results we're getting here would not lead to a passing grade," Strauss said. "There is so much room for improvement."

City Controller Alan Butkovitz, who hired Strauss to complete a study on the recent citywide property reassessments, presented a report Wednesday the two say shows the initiative is not going well.

City Controller Alan Butkovitz
RIKARD LARMA/METRO

Strauss said that among many issues with the reassessments under the new Actual Value Initiative is black people and poorer residents receive higher assessments, while the wealthier and white residents receive lower assessments.

Butkovitz paid Strauss $27,500 for the report.

Strauss said the assessment's accuracy was below industry standards and were based on incomplete data.

Mark McDonald, Mayor Michael Nutter's spokesman, said the administration "completely rejects the conclusions from this 'so-called' study."

"So what we have here is a city controller who in the past for whatever reason has loudly attacked AVI. He then goes out and hires an 'expert' to do a report that supports his conclusions and then puts it out a couple weeks before a hotly contested primary election," McDonald said.

Ariel Castro charged in kidnapping girls

Prosecutor. Castro's two brothers were not charged.

Ariel Castro was charged yesterday with kidnapping and raping three women who were rescued from his house on Monday after nearly a decade in captivity.

Castro's two brothers Pedro and Onil, originally arrested in the case, were not charged, said Cleveland city prosecutor Victor Perez at a news conference.

The charges came as police revealed that the women, who were rescued on Monday after one of them, Amanda Berry, fled with the help of a neighbor, had not seen any previous chances to escape in nearly 10 years of captivity.

"The only opportunity, after interviewing the young ladies, to escape was the other day when Amanda escaped," Cleveland Deputy Police Chief Ed Tomba said at the same news conference.

"They don't believe that they've been outside that home for the last 10 years," he said.

"They were not in one room, but they did know each other and they did know [the others were] there," he added.

Police said earlier that they found ropes and chains in the house that had been used to hold them prisoner. No human remains were found, they said.

Castro, 52, faces four counts of kidnapping relating to Berry, now 27, Gina DeJesus, 23, Michelle Knight, 32, and Berry's 6-year-old daughter, who was conceived and born during her mother's captivity, authorities said. REUTERS

Homeward bound

Victims arrive at their homes

Two newly freed Cleveland women had family homecomings yesterday after a decade of captivity.

Neither Amanda Berry nor Gina DeJesus spoke publicly as they were hustled inside their family's homes.

Abduction suspect

Dark side of suspect's life

In hindsight, there were signs of a darker side to Ariel Castro, the Cleveland man suspected of abducting three girls and holding them captive for around a decade.

Divorced years ago and never seen in the company of women, Castro suddenly started showing up in the largely Latino, working-class neighborhood with a 6-year-old girl.

It was his girlfriend's child, he told neighbors.

Castro, 52, was believed to have lived alone — yet on his lunch break would bring home enough bags of fast food and beverages for several people.

Castro was arrested in 1993 after a domestic violence complaint, though a grand jury decided not to indict him.

Police rescued three women locked inside Castro's house on Monday and found a 6-year-old girl who police believe was born in captivity.

Diplomat recounts lack of response to Benghazi attack

Hearing. Democratic members of Congress closely question Hicks and the other two witnesses.

A former U.S. diplomat in Libya told lawmakers yesterday more could have been done to prevent last year's deadly assault on the U.S. mission in Benghazi in which the ambassador was killed.

In a congressional hearing marked by emotional testimony and angry charges of political partisanship, Gregory Hicks, deputy chief of mission in Libya at the time of last year's attack, became the first U.S. official on the ground in Libya during the attacks to testify publicly.

He detailed a series of frantic phone calls to Washington and between Tripoli and Benghazi, including one from U.S. Ambassador Christopher Stevens that was cut off after Stevens said, "Greg, we're under attack."

Stevens and three other Americans were killed in the attack by suspected Islamist militants linked to al Qaeda on a lightly defended diplomatic mission and a more fortified CIA compound in Benghazi.

Hicks gave an emotional account during the hearing of the House of Representatives Oversight Committee, at times choking up and stopping to collect himself and sip water as he described the telephone call from Stevens with the news that the U.S. diplomats were under attack. REUTERS

Tax fraud. Berlusconi sentence upheld by Italian appeals court

A Milan appeals court upheld a four-year sentence for tax fraud against former prime minister and center-right leader Silvio Berlusconi yesterday, adding to the complications facing Italy's fragile coalition government.

In addition to the jail sentence for tax fraud in connection with the purchase of broadcasting rights by his television network Mediaset, the court's ruling would also bar Berlusconi from holding public office for five years.

However, neither sentence will take effect unless confirmed in a final appeal before the court of cassation when the three-stroke appeals process allowed under Italian law has been exhausted. REUTERS

Comeback complete, Sanford could be wild card in Congress

Political rebirth. Sanford earns a seat in the House of Representatives.

Fresh off a redemptive win in South Carolina's special election, former Gov. Mark Sanford's return to Congress will make him a prominent wild card in an already fractious Republican caucus.

Sanford will arrive in Washington owing little to the Republican Party's leadership, which withheld its support as he battled Colbert Busch in their heavily Republican district.

Once he returns to the House seat he held from 1995 to 2001, his independence and staunch fiscal conservatism could give him clout as Congress enters another round of divisive battles over the federal budget. REUTERS

Looking for peace.
US, Russia seek talks, but rebels skeptical

Russia and the United States agreed to seek new peace talks with both sides to end Syria's civil war, but opposition leaders were skeptical yesterday of an initiative they fear might let President Bashar al-Assad hang on to power.

Mindful the conflict may be far from over, Britain has urged fellow European Union states to lift an arms embargo, arguing it would strengthen those rebel groups favored by Western powers.

Visiting Moscow after Israel bombed sites near Damascus and as President Barack Obama also faces renewed calls to arm the rebels, U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry said late on Tuesday that Russia agreed to work on a conference in the coming weeks.

An East-West disagreement that has seen some of the frostiest exchanges between D.C. and Moscow since the Cold War has deadlocked U.N. efforts to settle the Syrian conflict for two years, so any rapprochement could bring an international common front closer than it has been for months. REUTERS

Despite air strikes, US still wary of Syria's air defenses

Caution. Syria's upgrades to its defense systems in recent years poses a problem for any U.S. intervention.

This is a satellite image of a destroyed warehouse and storage buildings at Damascus International Airport that were struck by a reported military airstrike on May 4. / GETTY IMAGES

Israeli missiles breached Syria's vaunted air defense system over the weekend, but that offered little comfort to U.S. military planners weighing the risks of any intervention against President Bashar al-Assad's forces.

With some of the possible U.S. military options in Syria involving a need for air power, the Pentagon remains concerned about Assad's ability to shoot down enemy aircraft with surface-to-air missiles, particularly in a sustained campaign.

If the United States did become more embroiled in Syria — perhaps in reaction to Damascus using chemical weapons — and wanted to wage a large air campaign there, it would likely first need to take out Syria's Russian-made air shield.

While the effectiveness of Syria's aging air force is unclear, most experts believe its air-defense missile system, considerably upgraded after a 2007 Israeli strike on a suspected nuclear site, remains more potent than any the United States has faced since it bombed Serbian forces in 1999. REUTERS

Hamas looks to root out Israel's spy networks

An alleged spy buried his face in his hands inside a Gaza jail as he admitted passing intelligence to Israel during its battles with armed Palestinian groups.

The Islamist Hamas government, which is pledged to Israel's destruction by force of arms, is lauding a recent campaign to root out informants in its midst, which it hopes will deprive Israel of a subtle but effective tool.

The man missed the deadline to turn himself in and will not receive leniency when his case goes to trial, Hamas says.

The Hamas Interior Ministry says the monthlong campaign, which ended on April 11, was a policy shift away from harsher tactics against spies. REUTERS

We check in with some of Hollywood's biggest names to see what they've been up to — in their own words, in 140 characters or fewer.

Today, Diablo Cody's son gets a bit mixed up, Ian Somerhalder wants clean air, Soulja Boy gets deep, Ice-T toots his own horn and Questlove has some advice for McDonalds.

@Diablocody: My son told me I have a small penis. Cruel on a couple of levels.

@IanSomerhalder: Beautiful morning in LA - sun, breeze but can't open my window b/c of the exhaust coming off of street. Time to end conventional gas engine.PLS

@Souljaboy: Listen to what your friends tell you because they can, and will always tell you the things you don't want to tell yourself.

@Ice-T: SVU NEWS: I just watched a pre screening of tonight's SVU episode. Crazy.. All I can say is "Edge of your seat." #SVU Best Episode!

1 Britney Spears: Heading to Las Vegas, baby

It looks like Britney Spears is heading to Las Vegas for a residency this fall, a la Celine Dion. She talked to Shape about how she's gearing up for it:

"I'm doing 90 minutes of yoga twice a week in addition to a lot of cardio — hour-long sessions three times a week with my trainer, Tony Martinez," she tells Shape. "The [Vegas] performances won't be simple — they'll be a massive party from start to finish. And to pull this off, I have to be in top condition and running at full speed." (Translation: No more Cheetos.)

She also is apparently paid by Nutrisystem to shill their diet system in interviews. She tells Shape that she's on the program (that's the shake for breakfast and lunch and a "sensible" dinner for those of you keeping track at home).

I think what is remarkable about this cover isn't her toned body, or the amazing Photoshop job from the art director. It's that she still rocks a belly button ring, and a very glittery one at that. What is this, 1996?

4 Madonna makes a killing via tour

Madonna will be honored as 2012's top touring artist on the Billboard Music Awards. The 54-year-old's MDNA tour roped in a $305 million at her 88 sold-out shows, with 2.2 million people attending.

Prince, Taylor Swift, and Lil Wayne are set to perform at the May 19 ceremony with Nicki Minaj, Bruno Mars, Miguel, Justin Bieber, Pitbull, Christina Aguilera, Selena Gomez, Macklemore & Ryan Lewis, Chris Brown, Ed Sheeran, Akon, Ne-Yo and David Guetta in attendance.

So, yeah, $305 million. We can cut out all of those "old" jokes we throw her way.

2 'The Great Gatsby' is getting not-so-great reviews

The reviews are trickling in for one of the most-buzzed-about movies of the year, and they are far from "Great." Alas, it doesn't seem like reviewers are keen on Baz Luhrmann's "The Great Gatsby," which opens this Friday.

One said it's as "boring as sitting through eighth-period English" and another went as far as calling it "overwrought, asinine, exaggerated and boring ... about as romantic as a pet rock." Even The New Yorker didn't let it down easy, saying that Luhrmann is "less a filmmaker than a music video director with endless resources and a stunning absence of taste."

Who cares? It's in 3-D, has a soundtrack produced by Jay-Z and it looks like glitter threw up all over it! Give it to me now!

3 Heavy metal lead singer busted for murder-for-hire

Tim Lambesis, 32, the lead singer of the Grammy-nominated metal band As I Lay Dying, was arrested on Tuesday on suspicion that he tried to hire an undercover detective to kill his estranged wife.

As I Lay Dying was scheduled to tour the country with several other metal acts starting later this month — so that's bad news for all of you ticket-holders out there.

Not much else is known about the case, other than it's sooo not metal if you hire someone to do your murder. That is, like, Metal 101.

LUKE EVANS

The actor found himself laughing at some of the darkest moments in "No One Lives."

PSYCHO KILLER, QU'EST-CE QUE C'EST?

In the horror film "No One Lives," Luke Evans plays a character named Driver, a man who reveals himself to be a psychopath of epic proportions. He proves himself a hero, though, when he encounters a gang of thugs. The Welsh actor will soon be seen among the cast of "Fast & Furious 6," which adds to a CV that already includes "Clash of the Titans," "Immortals" and smaller films like "Tamara Drewe."

How did you identify with a psychopathic character like Driver?
I guess I saw him as a tortured soul. He's a psychopath, and sometimes psychopaths are aware of their condition but can't do anything about it. The man is basically in love. It's a twisted love story, one of love and ownership — two emotions that I can relate to as a non-psychopathic human being.

You get to do some pretty amazing and grisly, bloody stuff in the film, such as the unforgettable moment of Driver emerging from the corpse of an oversized man. Did you like being covered so thoroughly in gore, or was that too horrible?
They are so grotesque and unbelievably brutal that I hope people find them entertaining as well as shocking. This is a quintessential popcorn slasher film by a director who utilizes every element of the genre to the extreme.

Should viewers be rooting for your character?
That element is the reason I was drawn to the script, because this character essentially becomes an antihero. He might be gratuitously murdering people left, right and center, but all of the people he chooses to murder aren't the nicest of people. The director and I wanted to challenge the audience's moral and ethical compass to see if they would start liking him.

What's the appeal of headlining a small horror film like this?
I was intrigued to find out whether making a horror film would be scary or not. I found out that it made me laugh continuously. The darker the scene, the harder I laughed. I'm not sure what that says about me.

Your character is somewhat vulnerable during an early sex scene, but more menacing walking nude to the house where his victims are holed up. Can you talk about how sex/nudity and violence are presented vis-a-vis Driver?
The nudity that my character displays [walking] in the film as opposed to the nudity you see in the sex scene are juxtaposed and represent the two different people that he is — which is a very common trait in a psychopath. Skin and the body both play important roles in this film, and I think Ryûhei [Kitamura, the director] uses them brilliantly. Standing naked covered head-to-toe in synthetic blood in a forest in Louisiana at 2 a.m. was a very liberating experience.

Leonardo DiCaprio plays the titular role in "The Great Gatsby." / WARNER BROS. PICTURES

1 'The Great Gatsby' When you think F. Scott Fitzgerald, you of course imagine 3-D, digital special effects and Bryan Ferry versions of Jay-Z songs, yes? Leonardo DiCaprio, Carey Mulligan, Tobey Maguire and other well-cast actors struggle to stay afloat amid director Baz Luhrmann's time warpy business.

2 'Peeples' Tyler Perry's name may be on it, but that's his only contribution to this comedy, starring Kerry Washington, Craig Robinson, David Alan Grier and Melvin Van Peebles play relatives at a Hamptons family reunion.

3 'Aftershock' Eli Roth co-wrote and co-stars in this thriller about a massive earthquake that endangers the patrons of an underground nightclub in Chile, which only brings about the best in people. No, not really.

4 'Kiss of the Damned' Like her siblings, Xan Cassavetes, son of John Cassavetes and Gena Rowlands, is a filmmaker. A cinephile (she made the doc "Z Channel: A Magnificent Obsession,") she'll bring her viewing history to this vampire flick with a twist.

5 'Midnight's Children' Salman Rushdie himself adapts his 1981 breakthrough novel that presents the history of India through the story of a family, including a son born precisely as his homeland gained independence. Deepa Mehta ("Fire," "Water") directs the film.

6 'Hava Nagila: The Movie' If you ever wanted a feature-length documentary on the history, meaning and evolution of the Jewish standard, here you go. Features both Harry Belafonte and — of course — that master of song, Leonard Nimoy.

7 'Harvest of Empire' "Democracy Now!" co-host Juan Gonzalez's book on the history of Latin Americans immigrating to the United States gets a documentary adaptation, with talking heads including Junot Diaz, Geraldo Rivera and Jesse Jackson.

8 'Iron Man 3' Most of the world ignored Robert Downey Jr. and writer/director Shane Black when they last teamed up, for 2005's "Kiss Kiss Bang Bang." We're assuming humanity simply felt bad, which is why their reunion has already made half a billion dollars.

9 'The Reluctant Fundamentalist' Mohsin Hamid's novel about a young Pakistani man who goes from Wall Street social climber to maybe-radical after being racially ostracized in the wake of 9/11 gets the big screen treatment, with director Mira Nair and stars Riz Ahmed, Kate Hudson and Kiefer Sutherland.

10 'Pain & Gain' We wanted another Michael Bay film. And for our sins, we got one.

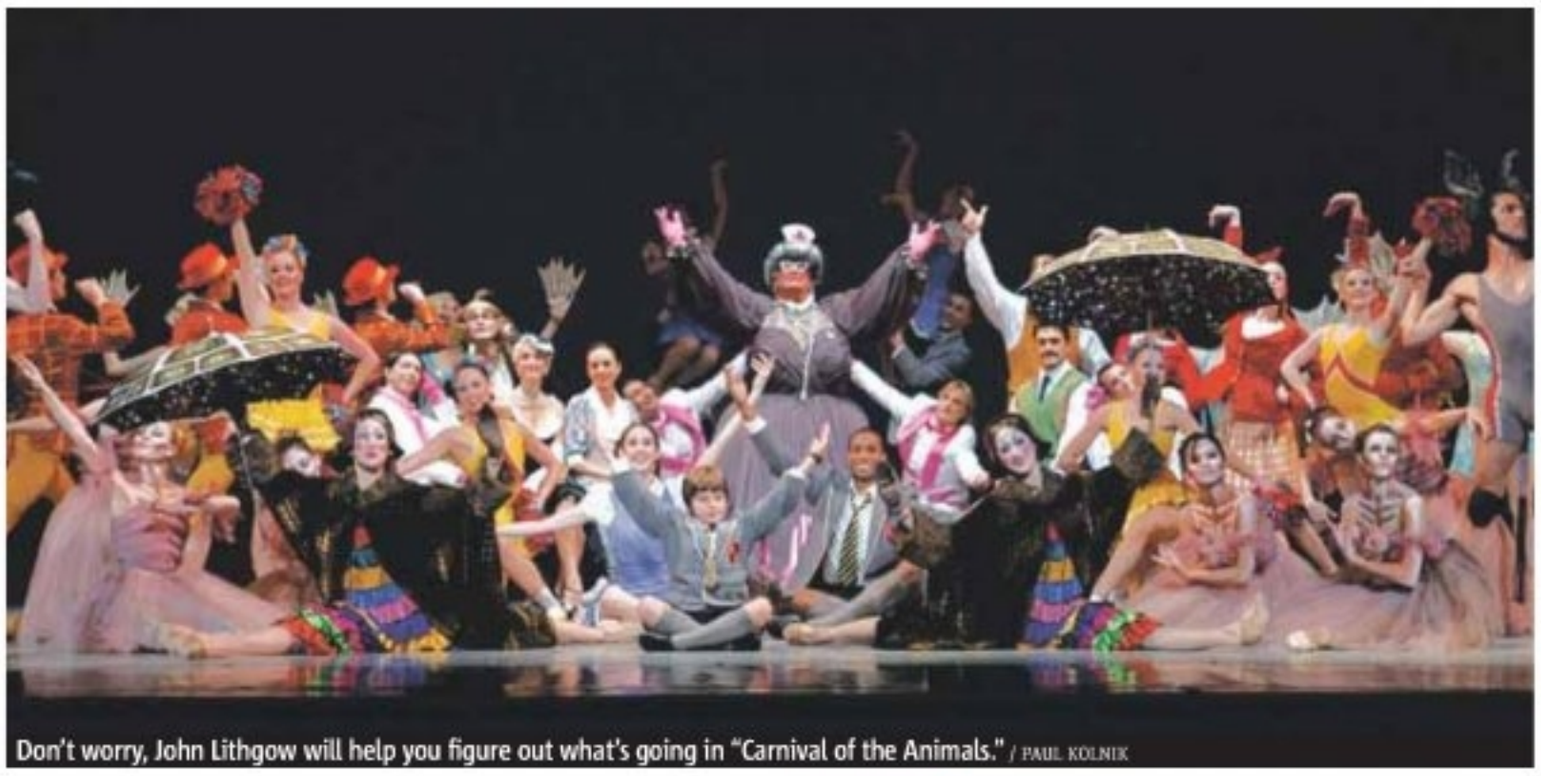
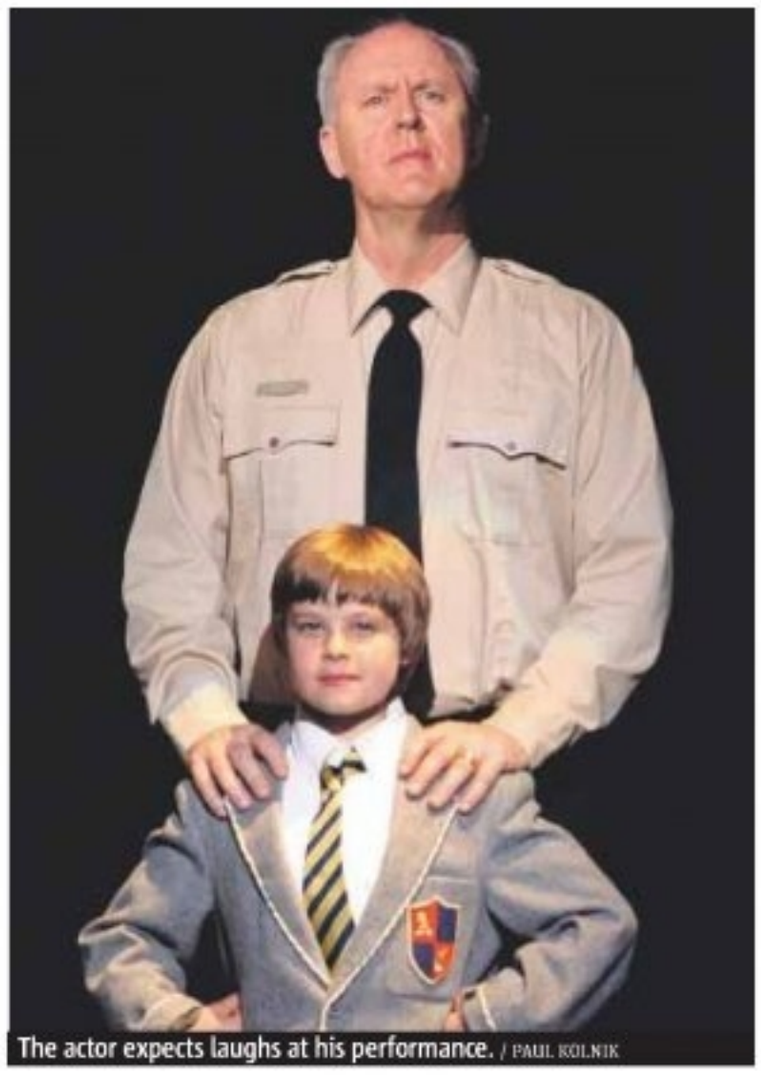
John Lithgow, ballet star in drag



Don't worry, John Lithgow will help you figure out what's going in "Carnival of the Animals." / PAUL KOLNIK



The actor expects laughs at his performance. / PAUL KOLNIK

Dance. The film and TV star narrates "Carnival of the Animals."

John Lithgow feels perfectly comfortable in women's clothing. Over the course of his 40 years on stage and screen, Lithgow has done his fair share of acting in drag. "That's one of my various stocks in trade," Lithgow says. "In 'Raising Cain' I was in drag in order to scare people. In 'The World According To Garp' I was intent on making people cry, it was such a sweet character. And in 'Carnival of the Animals,' it's flat-out farce. If people don't laugh, I'll be deeply embarrassed."

Lithgow has performed his narration for Christopher Wheeldon's ballet "Carnival of the Animals" more than 20 times since its 2003 premiere with the New York City Ballet, the latest being this weekend's performances with the Pennsylvania Ballet. He has yet to be embarrassed when he enters as Mabel Buntz, the school nurse and "scourge of each virus and germ," who is transformed into an elephant in the dreams of the story's young hero.

"I came up with the notion of a little boy running away from a field trip as a practical joke that goes awry," says Lithgow, who was invited to create the story by Wheeldon, who had choreographed "Sweet Smell of Success," the actor's first Broadway musical. "He ends up being locked in a natural history museum overnight and dreams that everybody in his community is an animal. The boys on the wrestling team are the jackasses, the girls in the hallway are the twittering birds in the aviary, his piano teacher is the baboon."

Despite his vast experience in a wide range of performing arts, "Carnival of the Animals" marked Lithgow's first experience with ballet. "It was really a very exciting and brand new work experience," he says. "I have vast admiration for ballet dancers, having experienced the rigor of their lives and work. They work so quickly and they do such daring things in no time at all."

Magic

A dash of disbelief

Best known for his roles on TV shows like "3rd Rock From the Sun" and "Dexter" and movies ranging from "Terms of Endearment" to "Harry and the Hendersons," Lithgow has been writing, recording and performing stories and music for children since the late 1990s.

- "I'm in the business of suspending disbelief," Lithgow says. "You never completely suspend an adult audience's disbelief, but you can totally suspend a child's disbelief. It's a wonderful thing to take them to a different place, to a magical world. I love entertaining children."

Storm Large will perform at the Keswick Theatre at 8 p.m. on Saturday. / LAURA DOMELA

There's a Storm brewing this weekend

Song. Storm Large plans to mix it up for her Philly-area stage show.

Storm Large will be making her Carnegie Hall debut when she sings with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra tonight. But it's the edgier Philly-area show you don't want to miss.

Large, who got her start on the CBS reality show "Rock Star: Supernova," will be performing with the Storm Large Band at the Keswick Theater on Saturday. And it will be a totally different type of evening than what she'll bring for a buttoned-up Carnegie Hall crowd.

"People have told me … what to do for a long time. I never listen. I do what I want to do and it has worked out," she says. "Think of my performance as a ride in the back seat of a nice car. I pass through several boundaries and tickle the final boundary as long as I can," she opines about her smooth performance.

She's planning a blend of original materials and covers, from the Pixies to Cole Porter, for the no-holds-barred, cabaret-style show.

Large is "more proper and wears a gown" for her regular appearances with the group Pink Martini, which plays classical and jazz music. On a recent break from touring with them, she filmed scenes with Geena Davis for an-as-yet-unnamed TNT series.

How's that for mixing it up?

"The audience should not expect a band that simply plays music in a dark room. I talk to the audience. I get as raunchy as the audience lets me," she says of this weekend's performance. "It's like I am on a first date with the audience. I have to take the temperature of the room so I don't know ahead of time how far I can go."

LAURA GOLDMAN
letters@metro.us

Coming home

In a way, Large's local appearance will be a homecoming for her. "My great-grandmother owned the original springhouse that Springhouse, Pennsylvania, is named for," she says. "My father was raised there. My uncle will be at the show."

Book club

Oprah chose her memoir, "Crazy Enough," as one of her book club picks. The musical version of "Crazy Enough" attracted sold-out crowds in Portland, where she lives, for months.

When the Four Tops met The Beatles

Music. The Motown legends will play the Keswick tomorrow.

Duke Fakir, seated, is a founding member of the Four Tops. / KESWICK THEATRE

When Motown's Four Tops wanted to make it big in the U.K., they looked to a little help from a new friend: Beatles manager Brian Epstein. He booked the Tops at his London Saville Theatre in 1966 in a performance which has since become legendary in England.

"He told us that he had seen us perform, and [said]: 'If you give me your top performance, I'll guarantee that when you come back, you'll be front-page news,'" says Four Tops founding member Duke Fakir. "We did do one of our best shows and he was so happy, he was almost crying. The audience was standing in the aisles calling for more and more and he said, 'You guys did it!'"

"When we came back," Fakir adds, "we were front-page news and it was like that for years."

The concert is regarded as a transition point in the U.K. from the Chuck Berry-ish rock of the early British Invasion bands to the more soulful and sophisticated pop sound which would soon emanate from England.

Epstein, who would pass away the following year at the age of 32, threw a party for the Tops at his home following the Saville triumph.

"Everybody was there — The Beatles, the Rolling Stones, the Small Faces, you name it. Anybody who was doing anything in England," Fakir says. "They respectfully asked us questions about our music and it was almost like a loving thing — they really embraced us."

The rest of the world has also embraced the Four Tops. The gentlemen of Motown have a long catalog of hits — "Reach Out I'll Be There," "I Can't Help Myself (Sugar Pie Honey Bunch)," "It's the Same Old Song," "Bernadette" — that have been enjoyed through the ages. The Tops — Fakir is the last surviving original member — come through the area with the Temptations in a show tomorrow at the Keswick Theatre in Glenside.

Taking a look at our own 'Backyard'

Four students documented their lives for "The Backyard Philly Project." / FERASHA FILMS

Documentary.
A Drexel grad recruited teens to make a movie.

Amanda Danziger, the founder of Ferasha Films, discovered her passion for filmmaking as a student at Drexel University doing volunteer work abroad. Her first two films documented that work: "Umuryango" was about children orphaned in the Rwandan genocide, and "Threads of Hope" was about women at a fair trade vocational school in India.

But her third project hits much closer to home. "Backyard Philly" is about four teens growing up in Penn Town, the housing project at Seventh and Greene. Danziger handed out video cameras and gave them a topic each month, from October 2011 to June 2012. The teens filmed themselves and their neighbors, creating video journals about the problems around them: violence, inadequate schools, often a lack of support at home. Interviews supplement this footage.

All four of the movie's subjects have hopes for a better life — one has already graduated from college, and two of the other three are planning to attend, thanks to a boost from the Helping Hand Rescue Mission. Youth director Adam Bruckner was the one who originally got Danziger involved in the neighborhood, when he recruited her to be a tutor in the mission's afterschool program.

"Filming is different in Philadelphia," Danziger says. "In a third-world country, I'd stick out like a sore thumb. In Penn Town, there were still cultural differences — we had to learn about the culture of the housing project, which is different from the culture I grew up in — but once we did, we were able to blend in."

Screening

The movie will premiere on Saturday at Drexel University's new URBN Center Annex. It's already sold out, but the filmmakers are providing DVDs and informational materials for both public and private screenings. More details are at www.ferashafilms.com.

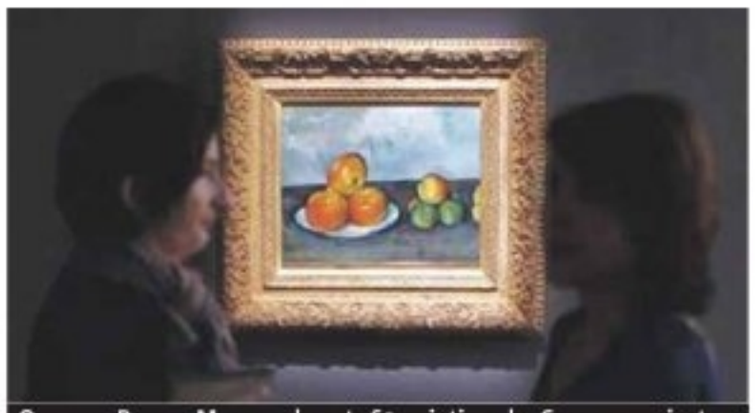
Big numbers for Impressionist art as spring auctions kick off

Les pommes.
Art collectors are paying millions for the masters.



Our own Barnes Museum boasts 69 paintings by Cezanne — just not this one, which sold at a Sotheby's auction. / REUTERS, MIKE SEGAR

The spring auctions got off to a strong start on Tuesday with Sotheby's solid sale of Impressionist and modern art taking in $230 million, led by a $42-million Cezanne still life and a $26-million Modigliani portrait.

A year after Sotheby's set the world auction record for any work of art with its sale of Edvard Munch's "The Scream" for $120 million, it managed a sale of works by Picasso, Rodin and Monet that saw 85 percent of 71 lots on offer finding buyers and came in just under its high pre-sale estimate of $235 million.

Calling its offerings "an extraordinary group of material," Simon Shaw, New York head of Impressionist and modern art for Sotheby's, said "it's very satisfying to see that the market agreed with us."

"If anyone needed a signal that the Impressionist market is not just alive but thriving, this sale provided the evidence," Shaw added.

The once-dominant Impressionist market has been eclipsed in recent years by the booming market for post-war and contemporary works, which have seen prices spike year after year.

David Norman, Sotheby's worldwide co-chairman of Impressionist and modern art, noted that the results showed that collectors "haven't all moved into contemporary yet."

Officials also said the sale was marked by unprecedented participation from Latin American and Asia collectors, providing further evidence of an increasingly global art market, at least at its highest echelons.

Prices held up against Sotheby's estimates, but bidding was measured and not marked by the free-wheeling sprees that characterized other successful sales in recent seasons.

The sale's top lot was Cezanne's still life "Les Pommes," which carried a pre-sale estimate of $25 million to $35 million but fetched $41.6 million including commission.

A signed 1906 cast of Rodin's "Le Penseur" ("The Thinker"), one of the world's most recognizable sculptures, was estimated to sell for about $10 million but did far better, going for just over $15.8 million.

A record was set for Georges Braque when "Paysage a La Ciotat" soared to $15.8 million, beating the high estimate.

The same work sold for $200,000 in the 1980s and about $3 million in 2000, Sotheby's said, underlining the investment value of such top-quality works.

Warby Parker: Eyes wide open

Shop Warby Parker glasses — including fun, colorful pairs for spring — at www.warbyparker.com.
COLLIN HUGHES

Q&A. The cool kids of eyewear talk the latest trends.

Neil Blumenthal and David Gilboa, co-founders of hip online eyewear brand Warby Parker — which sells trendy, affordable glasses with prescription lenses starting at $95 — recently opened the doors to their first brick-and-mortar location in New York City. We caught up with Gilboa, who tells us we should spring for pink glasses this summer.

What are some eyeglass trends that you love, and which ones are over?
For a while, really thick, chunky glasses were in vogue — and now a lot of those people are moving toward thinner frames.

And as we enter spring and summer, people can take a little more risk with color. In the past, people wore the same pair for two to three years.

Part of the reason why we launched Warby Parker is because we realized that we could make glasses affordable. If you can buy more pairs, you can take more risks and have more fun with color. [You can] have some frames that you wear to work and then some frames that are a little bit more fun, for weekends or when you're going out.

TINA CHADHA
tina.chadha@metro.us

PLUS

Gilboa's tips

Finding the perfect frame for your face

- You typically want the glasses shape to be the opposite of your face: If you have a really round face, you'll look better in square glasses.
- If the frame is covering your eyebrows, then the frame is probably a little bit too big for your face.

The five most stylish movies of all time

Not since Carrie Bradshaw hauled her collection of Manolos to the big screen has a film's wardrobe received as much hype as Daisy Buchanan's Prada-designed dresses and Jay Gatsby's Brooks Brothers suits have. So as "The Great Gatsby" finally hits theaters, we're revisiting our favorite fashion movies of all time — because the runways might give birth to the trends, but it's the movies that determine which ones will become iconic.

SARA CARLSSON/Metro World News

1 'Grey Gardens'

"It's very difficult to keep the line between the past and the present, awfully difficult," Little Edie says in the film, ironically predicting how she'd impact the fashion world. Depending on who you ask, "Grey Gardens" is not so much a documentary about two recluses related to Jackie O. as it is a 100-minute trend machine. Little Edie's head scarves, Big Edie's sorbet-colored house coats, the long furs, the wacky layering, the wild print-mixing: It's all in style right now. And these women — not Anna Wintour — created the look.

2 'Rear Window'

It's hard to overstate Alfred Hitchcock's influence on fashion. Alexander McQueen famously built a collection around his movies. And you see hints of Grace Kelly's Edith Head-designed costumes in "Mad Men." In "Rear Window," Kelly only wears five outfits, each one memorable and relentlessly copied.

3 'Funny Face'

"Take the picture!" Hubert de Givenchy and Audrey Hepburn sealed their relationship as one of the movie world's greatest duos with a single scene: Audrey running down a staircase in the Louvre, her red sash floating above her mimicking Winged Victory. Givenchy created costumes for four of Hepburn's movies, all of which we were tempted to put on this list.

4 'Bonnie and Clyde'

Faye Dunaway's mid-length skirt suits, knit tops, berets and silk scarves are iconic, making this the second most referenced movie in fashion history.

5 'Breakfast at Tiffany's'

Coco Chanel is credited with creating the Little Black Dress, but Audrey Hepburn popularized it. The satin Givenchy sheath she wore as Holly Golightly was undisputedly the most famous LBD of all time.

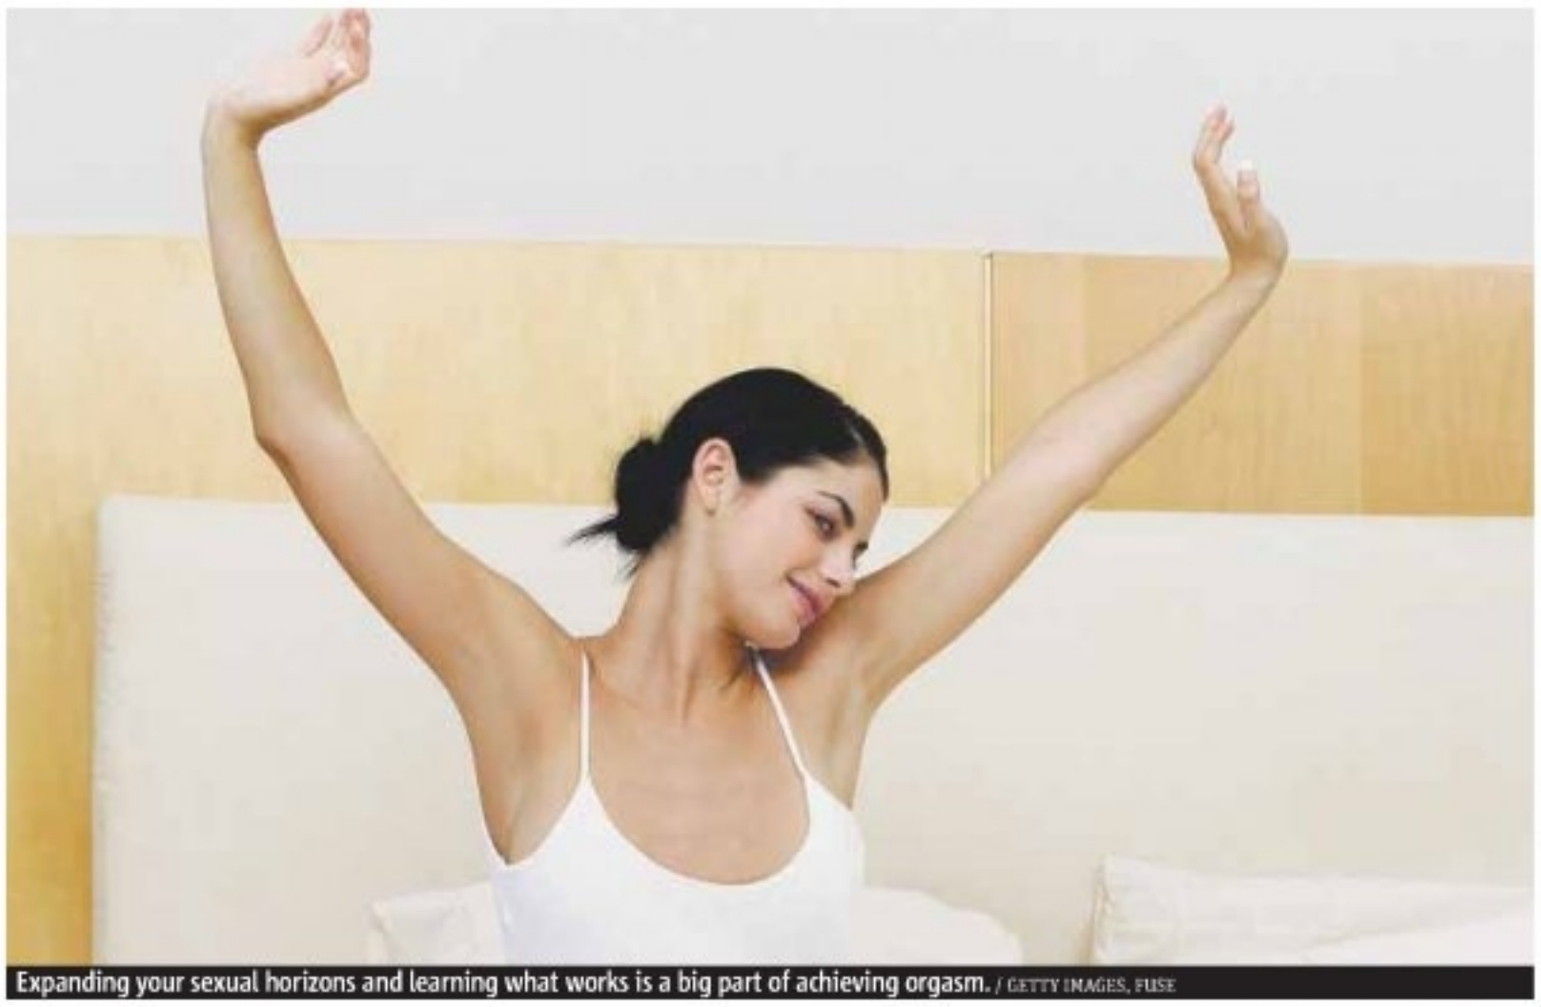
GETTING YOUR DOSE OF VITAMIN 'O'



Expanding your sexual horizons and learning what works is a big part of achieving orgasm. / GETTY IMAGES, FUSE

Ah, the orgasm. To many, it is necessary for everyday living and easy to achieve. But for countless others it is elusive. Many of my female patients say they are frustrated that they can't achieve an orgasm when they are with their partners. They've read how-to sex manuals, taken herbal concoctions — some have even gotten their hands on Viagra to try and get things moving. Usually they come in after several visits to medical professionals to explore nonmedical factors that might be contributing to their inability to get there.

I start the session with one simple question: Can you bring yourself to orgasm? The answer is usually "yes." In that case, these women are physically just fine: Their bodies respond to certain stimuli and they are able to reach orgasm. This tells me that the issue is about how they think about sex, their partners and themselves. Similar to fear and anxiety, by changing the way they think about a situation it can make all the difference in the world.

— Metro does not endorse the opinions of the author, or any opinions expressed on its pages.

Tips

- See this issue as an opportunity to improve and know yourself rather than as a problem. Take the opportunity to expand your sexual horizons and learn what works. Remember, you've already proven to yourself that an orgasm is biologically possible. So before tweaking your technique, it is important to feel comfortable with your body. Tell yourself that you can enjoy an orgasm while feeling good about taking care of your needs.
- Accept that sex is more than just a methodical process, and much of what stands between a self-induced orgasm and one with your partner occurs in your head.
- Know that the formula for a fulfilling orgasm includes more than just an adjustment of speed and intensity. An emotional bond, closeness and being in sync with each other's bodies is crucially important. Popping Viagra is probably about as effective as eating cherries.
- Don't focus solely on technique or the genitals. This will only lead to anxiety and tension — both of which are incompatible with relaxing and letting yourself go.
- Realize that there is more to sex than just traditional sexual intercourse. Recognize the entire body has the potential to feel good and attempt to stimulate each other in ways you haven't tried yet.

Climactic thoughts

"By gently exploring each other and communicating your respective needs, you'll help to lower inhibitions and feel more comfortable en route to that mind-numbing-orgasm."

All deserve a proper burial

I'm not sure why Tsarnaev's final resting place is such an issue. The guy is dead — what more do we want from him? To kill him again, and again, and again? For what? So that somehow his horrible act can be undone? Why do we insist on this type of revenge? Why don't government officials get involved? I am in NO way taking away from the suffering and loss.

What I'm saying is, at the end of the day, this guy is someone's son, nephew, father, etc. He may not deserve a proper burial, BUT he is entitled to one whether we agree with how he lived his life or not.

RUBEN SAUCEDA, VIA EMAIL

Bill doesn't help those who pay

How wonderful! Congress is on the brink of passing a "comprehensive immigration bill." Who does it serve? There are only three goals for today's politician: One, get reelected to office; two, get elected to a higher office; three, create a legacy! As reported, the bill as proposed will likely cost taxpayers $9 trillion, while tax revenues from this group are estimated at $3 trillion. Final score: politicians/immigrants 100 percent, taxpayers 0.

Halladay will undergo a scope and cleanup on his injured right shoulder. / GETTY IMAGES

Doc: So you're saying there is a chance?

MLB. Roy Halladay will undergo surgery on his injured shoulder, but he expects to return this season.

Roy Halladay expects to return and pitch for the Phillies — not in 2014, folks, this season.

Earlier this week, Halladay had his injured right shoulder examined by a doctor in Los Angeles. The results were very encouraging, according to Halladay, and he hopes to make a comeback this season after undergoing arthroscopic surgery next week. The procedure is considered minor, just a "scope" and "cleanup."

"The doctor seemed pretty optimistic that if what they saw is correct, I could come back and be a lot more effective and have a chance to pitch this year," Halladay said. "He said he thought they could turn back the clock two or three years for me. I thought it was very good news."

An MRI actually revealed a bone spur and partially torn rotator cuff, something that showed up last season when he hit the disabled list. Halladay isn't out of the woods yet. Doctors still have to perform the surgery and assess the damage inside the shoulder. All things considered, though, this is very good news.

"I really feel I have a shot to come back and help our team," Halladay said.

The Phillies don't have a timetable for Halladay's return and don't want to rush him back. Other pitchers have returned to action in three months. Until then, GM Ruben Amaro Jr. will keep his options open. He didn't rule out adding help.

"We remain optimistic that he can come back and pitch at some point this year," Amaro said. "If that's the case and he can help us, that would be great. I don't have a crystal ball."

Next man up

Tyler Cloyd will get the first shot at replacing Halladay in the rotation. The 25-year-old will get the start Friday in Arizona.

- Cloyd went 12-1 with a 2.35 ERA and won International League MVP honors a year ago. The right-hander went 2-2 with a 4.91 ERA in six starts for the Phils last season in the big leagues.

Singh suing Tour

Vijay Singh sued the PGA Tour yesterday one week after the league decided not to punish him for using deer antler spray, a banned substance, in trace amounts. Singh's lawsuit is claiming the PGA's investigation ruined his reputation. The PGA Tour has since changed its stance on deer antler spray.

A-10 addition

Atlantic 10 adds school

The Atlantic 10 Conference unanimously voted yesterday to add Davidson College (N.C.) to the league. Davidson, which boasts Golden State's Stephen Curry as a proud alum, will join the A-10 on July 1, 2014, and begin competition in the 2014-15 academic year. The A-10 will also add George Mason to its ranks in July.

CARFAX VEHICLE HISTORY REPORTS

Pence enjoying his new life as world champion

MLB. The former Phillies right fielder is moving on from his days patrolling the outfield at Citizens Bank Park.

Weird is how Hunter Pence described it when asked about how it would be to play against the Phillies.

"It's weird," Pence said. "It has to do with how much I loved playing there. It was just a year playing there, but it had such an impact on me."

It wasn't weird for the Phillies' former right fielder when he faced Cliff Lee. He was a triple short of the cycle Monday night, and the only Giant to generate any offense.

"They're a tough team," Pence said. "You can't discount what those veterans on the Phillies can do. I know it from being in that clubhouse. Look what they did last year after they traded me. They were all but left for dead, and they almost made the playoffs with a late charge that most didn't see coming."

Pence still talks glowingly about Phillies fans.

"They're unlike any other [fan base] in baseball," Pence said. "It was so much fun to come to the park every day."

But Pence admits he loves coming out to AT&T Park, arguably the finest new yard in the majors — and he doesn't even need a car to get there.

"I take a scooter," Pence said. "It's hard to drive in San Francisco but there are bike lanes, so I take advantage of it."

Happ discharged after frightening injury

Former Phillies pitcher J.A. Happ is out of the hospital after being drilled in the head by a line drive Tuesday night.

Happ, who was traded in the 2010 deal for Roy Oswalt, was discharged yesterday and upgraded from fair to good condition. He was hit in the left temple, crumpled in pain and was carted off.

Happ, now with Toronto, was feeling responsive, according to Blue Jays officials.

"I'm in good spirits," Happ said in a statement released by the hospital. "I definitely appreciate the support of the baseball community. It's been overwhelming, the messages and kind words I've been getting. I just want to thank everyone for that, and I look forward to getting back out there soon." METRO

Lead paint poisoning affects over one million children today.
Learning disabilities, hearing loss, speech delays, violent behavior and, in rare cases, seizures and even death: these are just some of the effects lead paint poisoning has on young children. If your home was built before 1978, lead paint on your walls, doors, windows and sills may be dangerous. And it's not just large paint chips that can cause damage. In fact, three granules of lead dust are enough to poison your child. Let's make all kids lead-free kids. To learn more about the simple steps you can take to safeguard your family, log on to LEADFREEKIDS.org or call 800-424-LEAD.
